The sports and leisure center was built in 2003 by the city of Bad Aussee. It was planned by the architectural office «Hohensinn Architecture» to meet the demand for a multi-purpose, economically, organizationally and energetically optimized building for soccer and other clubs conducting sports. It includes arenas for track and field athletics, fields for soccer, basketball and German curling, a fitness room, a skate park and a bistro. The tribunes hold 3'000 visitors.

In 2003 the center received the Styrian award for timber construction in the category «public buildings».
